October 13, 2006 news release by Billy D. Wood, County Extension Agent, Agriculture
Grazing Management School

Does it seem like the grass in your pasture is too short, or not producing as well as you think it should? Would you like to learn more about pasture management? Then consider attending the “Grazing Management School” on Thursday, December 14 at 6:30 p.m. at the Overbrook Salebarn.

The school will cover the basics of grazing management: grasses and forages, soils and fertility, livestock grazing, fencing, and grazing systems. Gary Kilgore, KSU SE Area Agronomy Specialist, will teach the class. He will utilize and show how to use a “Grazing Stick” to help make grazing management decisions. Attendees will receive a free “Grazing Stick” to take home and use to improve their grazing management.

KSU Extension Councils in Osage, 785-828-4438, Shawnee, 785-232-0062, and Douglas, 785-843-7058, Counties are sponsoring this school, which is open to landowners from any county. Please call one of these Extension Offices by December 11 to register, so the sponsors can be sure to have enough meeting supplies and refreshments.
