

SALLY SULLIVAN MOSAICS ART OPENING AND EXHIBIT

April 4, 2008 • First Friday at the Crossroads Arts District
Crossroads Missouri Bank, 122 Southwest Blvd., Kansas City, MO 64108

Sally's search for a new hobby resulted in the relaxing, creative, colorful world of Mosaic. Mosaic became a much needed diversion from her "black and white" accounting career. Sally has discovered that the right side of the brain has as much to offer as the left side. Mosaic is like working a jig-saw puzzle without the box cover for direction. What a delightful combination!

Having experimented with mosaic for about three years, Sally's eternal desire to learn combined with an increasing passion for the art attracted Sally to a mosaic school in Ravenna, Italy. There she learned about the ancient art of Mosaic; the techniques, the materials and style, as they compare to modern mosaic.

Sally's interest remains primarily with modern mosaic and she has found a niche in the western art world—horses. She currently lives in Kansas City, MO on twenty acres, home to five horses, an Australian Shepard and a slew of barn cats. The animals and gardens provide constant inspiration.

Sally's eclectic style is apparent in her mosaics. Stained glass is the medium of choice. Her subjects are bold and colorful. Her motto: Mix it up and take a chance.

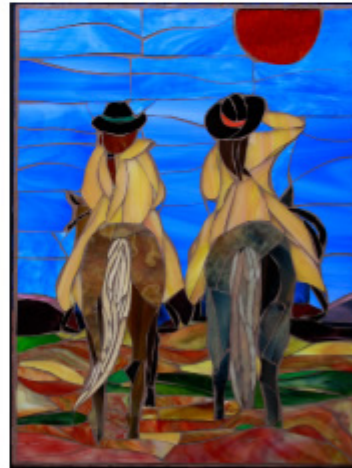

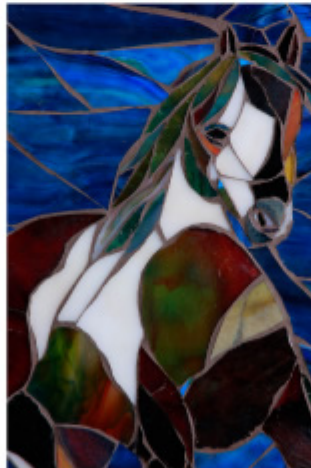

Exhibit will remain on display in the lobby of Missouri Bank Crossroads Branch for the entire month of April, 2008. Exhibit will be available to purchase.
